

2020 Graduate School Outstanding Mentoring Award

The Graduate School Outstanding Mentoring Award recognizes excellence in a variety of mentoring functions. This award encourages and rewards innovation and effectiveness in mentoring graduate students during their educational experience. A broad definition of a mentor is:

Mentors are advisors, those with career experience willing to share their knowledge to enhance the professional and personal development of a protégé. They provide both emotional and moral support and encouragement through career related counseling and coaching. Mentors provide specific feedback on one's performance. They enhance access to career related information and exposure to various professional resources, opportunities, networks, and other role models. These actions promote the protégé's sense of competence and confidence.

In 2020, two mentoring awards will be given, one in Professional and Applied Sciences and one in Social and Behavioral Sciences (given in even years). Awards in Humanities/Fine and Applied Arts and Life and Physical Sciences are given in odd years. Each award will be for $500.

Nominees must be current members of the Graduate Faculty at the University of Georgia. Only individuals who have not previously received the award are eligible. Recipients will be selected by a committee of graduate faculty representing each of the award categories.

The following criteria are intended as general guidelines for nominating faculty members:

- Excellence in research/scholarship guidance
- Positive impact on students individually and as a group
- Assistance in career decision-making and advancement

Nominations may only be made by graduate students and all nomination materials must be prepared by the graduate students. If more than one student wishes to nominate the same faculty member, a group of students may prepare one nomination form and set of nomination materials.

To nominate a faculty member for the award, download the nomination form from the Graduate School website:
